Biographical/Historical Note

In April of 1952, more than fifty Maine women who were engaged in press, radio, and public relations work met to form an organization they called Maine Press and Radio Women. Charlotte Michaud, a writer for the Portland Sunday Telegram, spearheaded the efforts. The group was affiliated with the New England Woman's Press Association. Maine was the first New England state to form its own branch of the regional organization. At the time, women were not permitted to join the National Press Club (they were not admitted until 1971). The constitution and by-laws of the newly formed group set out their purpose: "to promote acquaintance and good fellowship among news and radio women; and, through association, promote higher standards, widen opportunities and better relationships in these fields." Members had to be paid contributors to a news publication or a broadcaster, script or continuity writer. Officials were elected by the membership; there were no paid staff members. Among the early officers of the organization were Charlotte Michaud of the Portland Sunday Telegram, Agnes Gibbs of the radio station WCSH, Ruth Henderson of the Kennebec Journal, and Frances Hapgood of the Portland Press Herald. By 1959, the organization began reaching out to women who worked in television, changing its name to Maine Press and Radio-TV Women in order to better reflect the new reality of the communications field. By the late 1960s, the organization was floundering. In the June 1969 newsletter, then president Bea Chapman wrote, "I believe most of us realize we need a stronger organization, better communications, more professionalism, and more clearly defined concrete purposes." In 1976, the organization changed its name again, becoming the Maine Media Women. In 1977, the group incorporated as a nonprofit, signaling a new beginning for the organization, after several years of sluggish attendance at events and apathy. In 1980, it became an affiliate of the National Federation of Press Women. Another big change occurred in November 1992, when members of MMW voted unanimously at the Fall Workshop to secede from the national organization. The decision was triggered by the NFPW's dues increase, an increase that MMW members felt was far too dramatic. Despite name and affiliation changes and throughout ebbs and flows of interest and commitment by its members, the statewide organization and its local chapters continued to organize educational offerings; sponsor awards, contests, and a scholarship opportunity for women with an interest in media; and provide networking opportunities. In 1999, the organization boasted 115 members. In 2014, Maine Media Women changed its mission. It functions now as "a community of creative women who support and encourage each other's creative work." (www.mainemediawomen.org) Membership dues are no longer collected and meetings are open to anyone who is interested. The organization still offers educational and networking opportunities for women in communications careers, but members decided that the original mission had been accomplished. Among the many women who were active with the organization over the years were Lee Agger, Kim Block, Kathy Brandes, Elena Brandt, A. Carman Clark, Terry Dodge, Sherry Hanson, Katy Perry, Lillian Potter, Jude Stone, and others.

Collection Scope and Content

The Maine Media Women Records consist of the papers generated by officers of the organization in the course of carrying out their functions. It also contains membership directories, newsletters published by MMW, newspaper clippings, and photographs. The vast majority of the materials are paper-based, although there are a few computer disks, two VHS tapes, a plaque, and a ribbon and pin decoration. The records are arranged in seven series, following an organizational framework that MMW members had decided upon in workshops facilitated by Cally Gurley, curator of the Maine Women Writers Collection at UNE. Maine Media Women, which was run by elected trustees and had no paid staff, operated as a decentralized organization. Officers and members worked from their homes or their day job offices. There seems to have been no central filing location or system, with various officers contributing files and folders to the collection in several different acquisitions. The collection charts the growth of the organization from its founding in 1951 to the mid-2000s. Although the women who founded MMW worked in a field dominated by men, the records rarely address outright any questions of gender inequality in the profession. Rather, prevalent themes include the struggle to achieve a work-life balance, the challenges of incorporating new technologies into the communications field, and the difficulties faced by an organization with a broad mission that is run by volunteers with busy home lives and timeconsuming careers.

Arrangement

This collection is organized into 7 series: 1. Governance (1952-2007), 2. Programs (1952-2008), 3. Members, (1977-2007), 4. Communications, (1951-2005), 5. Financial (1967-2004), 6. Publications, (1997-2011), and 7. Scrapbooks, Clippings, and Photographs (1952-2012). The basic series arrangement was determined by members of Maine Media Women in consultation with Cally Gurley, archivist at University of New England. Although the series arrangement had been predetermined, most of the papers were not organized according to this arrangement and had to be sorted into the appropriate series. Within each series, material is arranged alphabetically by subject and chronologically within each subject heading, with exceptions noted. Papers were removed from plastic sleeves and plastic presentation folders and the plastic pieces were disposed of. Several scrapbooks were disbound and the materials transferred to folders. A few periodicals (Press Woman) were removed and cataloged with library periodicals holdings. We pulled personal identification information on scholarship recipients.

Scope and Contents

Series 1, Governance, (1952-2007) contains by-laws, leadership manuals, committee and task force papers, minutes, reports and agendas from meetings, officers' correspondence, and other materials related to the administration of the organization. Included in this series are revisions to the by-laws, amendments, and leadership manual; there are copies with handwritten notes detailing proposed changes. Sections of the leadership manual document the different offices of the organization (president, treasurer, immediate past president, historian) and various committees (membership, newsletter, special projects). Some of the files for 1996 are on three and a half inch floppy disks and the minutes for meetings held between September 2012 and April 2013 are on CD; all the other files are on paper. The series also contains correspondence among officers, with the bulk of the correspondence originating from two trustees, Terry Dodge and Jude Stone. Chapter meeting minutes also form part of this series.

Programs, 1952-2008

Scope and Contents

Series 2, Programs, (1952-2008), contains papers that document Maine Media Women's roster of programming, including annual meetings, workshops, contests and awards, seminars, and the scholarship program. Among the records are correspondence with presenters and participants, publicity materials, and notes. Included in this series are notes from three workshops conducted by Cally Gurley, curator at the Maine Women Writers Collection, in which MMW members created the initial arrangement of their records.

Members, 1977-2007

Scope and Contents

The papers in Series 3, Members, (1977-2007), include correspondence pertaining to membership, annual membership directories that list members' names, contact information, and job title, and files documenting the payment of annual membership dues. It also has files on individual members. These files contain biographical information as well as examples of individual's work. This section is organized alphabetically by last name rather than chronologically. Also, in some cases, published articles were removed to the periodicals collection where they can be retrieved. Where this was the case, notes direct the researcher to periodicals.

Communications, 1951-2005

Scope and Contents

Series 4, Communications, (1951-2005), consists of MMW brochures and newsletters, as well as notes pertaining to the design and production of the newsletters along with mock-ups for some issues. Most of the brochures are undated. The earliest newsletters were apparently published irregularly and consisted of one or two typed pages of news that were mailed to members. The collection is spotty for newsletters from the first three decades. The Bulletin from July 1968 combines handwritten titles and typed columns of news and is titled "For the Record." By June of 1969, the organization boasted a more professional-looking publication that was titled "Speaking Out" and was published quarterly. The collection consists of only a few issues between 1969 and 1973. By April 1977, the next issue contained in the collection, the newsletter is simply called "Newsletter" and it documents a lack of interest on the part of members in the business of the organization, citing poorly attended workshops and programs. Its look is once again more homegrown rather than professional. Sometime in 1988, the newsletter became known as "The Maine Line." It was published bi-monthly, with occasional longer breaks in between issues. In the early 2000s, it once more became a quarterly publication. The Fall 2004 issue made note of the fact that most members were receiving the issue electronically, with a hard copy still being mailed to those members without email. (MMW's web site was launched 2002-2003.)

Publications, 1997-2011

Scope and Contents

Series 6, Publications, (1997-2011), contains work published by Maine Media Women as an organizational entity. MMW created a 50th Anniversary video on the history of the organization that was researched and produced by MMW member Jude Stone. This series contains the two videotapes as well as Jude Stone's research, correspondence, and production notes. MMW also published an anthology of writings by members called "Jump Lines." This series contains Katy Perry's notes about this work. The series also contains papers that document two ideas that never materialized.

Scrapbooks, clippings and photographs, 1952-2012

Scope and Contents

Series 7, Scrapbooks, Clippings, and Photographs (1952-2012), consists of the newspaper clippings and scrapbooks that members of the organization collected and compiled over the years. Clippings were photocopied and organized chronologically. Several scrapbooks were disbound because of the poor quality of the pages and were photocopied onto acid-free paper. Loose materials between pages of the scrapbooks were removed and rehoused. The materials in this collection document events organized by MMW as well as people (officers and members) affiliated with the organization.
