
Stanford Geriatric Education Center (SGEC)
160-Hour Faculty Development Program in Ethnogeriatrics
July 2012 - June 2013

The Stanford Geriatric Education Center (SGEC), in the Stanford University School of Medicine, invites faculty to apply for an intensive 12-month 160-Hour Faculty Development Program in Ethnogeriatrics. This hybrid (in-person and online) educational experience uses a train-the-trainer approach to train multidisciplinary geriatric health care faculty. It is funded by a USDHHS, Bureau of Health Professions GEC grant (No. UB4HP19049).

Requirements for the SGEC one-year Faculty Development Program (FDP) include:

- ❖ On-Site Training. Four (4) days at the Stanford University School of Medicine in Palo Alto, CA from July 10-13, 2012, for didactic/resource sessions and interactive workshops on Health Literacy & Ethnogeriatrics.
- ❖ Online Training. Self-guided/self-paced, flexible learning, which incorporates web-based modules, multimedia resources, and on-demand webinars (~10 hours per month over 11 months).
- ❖ Mentoring/Consulting Sessions with the SGEC interdisciplinary health care faculty team and required meetings via communication technologies (~2 hours per month over 11 months).
- ❖ Capstone Project. A trainee project related to ethnogeriatric care at the trainee's home institution, with SGEC faculty support (~3 hours per month).

Upon completion of the 160 hours, the trainee will receive an SGEC Certificate of Completion in Ethnogeriatrics.

Curriculum topics include:

- | | |
|--|--|
| • Ethnogeriatrics in primary care | • Ethnicity and dementia |
